Griffith believes that a ball player should have a week or ten days in which to work out kinks, but once they reach the proper condition he thinks they should be driven to the limit in order to bring them around primed for he beginning of the real campaign.

When he returns here Griffith expects of find his advance guard in such shape that he can call upon them to lo all sorts of hard work without jeopardizing their chances of being absolutely ready in the middle of April.

One of the things that militate against the chances of a number of clubs is the fact that during the off-season rome of work.

"If Pennock develops as fast as I'd like," said Connie Mack today, "he'll be taking turns on the mound this spring with the others,"

It is more than probable that the regular twirlers of the Mackmen will be Bender, Plank, Brown, Bush, and Shawkey. Jack Coombs may come acress with the old brand of stuff, but Connie won't depend upon him as long as the youngsters are doing well. A second southpaw, however, is demanded, and Pennock is expected to be that lad.
